

HENRYBUILT

Junior Architect/Designer

Positions available in New York City, the Bay Area and Los Angeles

We are seeking early career designers with interior architecture or relevant industrial design experience who want to work at the intersection of those two design disciplines. This is an opportunity to join a diverse team that is working together to build a distinctive family of design-driven companies.

Henrybuilt's design team provides a specialized design expertise for projects throughout North America and internationally, working directly with homeowners and alongside leading architects, designers, and builders. We create exceptional spaces and experiences for our clients and their families.

This is position for someone who wants to really get involved in an entrepreneurial, growth-oriented company, helping to improve our client's experiences, our products, and the way we work. Henrybuilt is now one of a family of 3 companies, including Space Theory, and a software company – Symbolic Frameworks. To learn more about being part of Henrybuilt is like, read a personal note from Julianna Morais, Henrybuilt's Vice President of Design.

Take a look at the Project Story section of our website to get a sense of the range of projects we work on, and our portfolio of recent work (password: long run) to get a broader view of the work we do. Hear from the people who design and build the Henrybuilt family of products.

Objectives of this role

This is a development track position for a senior design role. In this position you will work as a creative, technical and client service assistant for a single senior designer within Henrybuilt's design team. As you gain skill and knowledge, you will take on more creative and client management responsibility. This role is designed to support growth over an approximately 2-year period (depending upon the pace of individual skill development) into a more senior design position.

Responsibilities

- Under the direction of a senior designer, you will collaborate in developing project ideas, assist in creating project proposals, develop material palettes, and complete design and engineering drawings - remaining involved in the full cycle of a project from conception through development and installation.
- Communication with client group will increase as skills develop – to include presentation of designs, research, answering client group questions, and managing meeting preparation and schedules, then as skills develop managing some client meetings independently.
- You will coordinate with engineering and production as files are prepared for production.
- You will begin taking on projects independently as your skills develop, starting with smaller projects.

Skills and Requirements

- Strong design ability – demonstrated within a portfolio.
- Ability to understand design direction and intent and translate them into presentation materials and details within a drawing set.
- Experience generating product specifications, and the language and use of redlines to refine a drawing set.
- Ability to manage multiple projects at one time and effectively switch from one to another in an organized way.
- High level of proficiency with digital design tools including Autocad. We are looking for someone who can demonstrate high levels of discipline and organization in their work approach.
- A minimum of 2-3 years working within an architecture, interior design or industrial design office.
- Strong communication skills and a natural ability to develop good work relationships.
- Bachelor's degree in architecture, interior design or industrial design

About Henrybuilt

We founded Henrybuilt in 2001 to challenge the standard for what it means to live well in a home. We've developed a family of inter-related, highly refined products that our design team carefully tailors to how people live. Our systems, together with our design service, combine hand crafted beauty with years of focused innovation – resulting in an industrially engineered product that is adaptable to a range of tastes and reflects and adds to the architectural quality of a space.

Please send resume, portfolio and cover letter to designposition@henrybuilt.com